ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS:

We, the humble yearbook staff, would like to extend our thanks to the following people who have helped us try to put together a first-rate yearbook in only one semester:

Paul Brindamour for his advice, and a beautiful yearbook contract.

Joe Norris of T. D. Brown studios for his time, patience and his machine prints.

John Levis of Taylor Publishing for 12 different contracts, 10 ice cream cones, a great sales pitch and the power to back it up.

Roger Conway for his much-needed legal advice.

Mary MacDonald for printing the titles.

Bob Emerson for his fantastic photographs.

The URI Library Archives for the use of all the old glass negatives and lantern slides.

Bob Izzo for the use of his darkroom to duplicate them in.

Jimmy Martin for finally coming through with his great sports literature, and for the night at the Pub (or was it the Willows?).

Mrs. Nye and Mrs. Chace for putting up with all the questions.

The Good Five Cent Cigar for the use of their dryer.

The student body for providing a stimulus.

The Legend of Old Ben Butler

Today, the cannon on the quad sits in solitary. It is rarely appreciated by passers-by, and unequivocally ignored by many students during their entire four years here. But an aura of dignity seems to surround it at the same time. For, it is a cannon, and it cannot be denied that an old cannon holds within its iron walls secrets of the past — mysterious and romantic stories of Civil Wars, dying men and patriotism — tales that seem ready to burst from its silent mouth, as cannon balls undoubtedly did in the old days.

The URI cannon, nicknamed 'Old Ben Butler,' may symbolize past battles in the War Between the States, yet, it is known and has been recorded as fact to have participated in an even more symbolic battle — the battle for the University of Rhode Island.

The Rhode Island Agricultural School was officially opened in 1889, with a grand total of one classroom building, the Taft Laboratory, along with a faculty of five.

Previously, Brown University had been carrying on a rather small and meager program of agriculture and mechanic arts. But it was situated in urban Providence and the program lagged.

A few years later, however, the battle began. In 1892, the Second Morrill Act was passed, creating more funds for a state university. A year-long controversy was begun over who would receive the funds — Brown University, or the Rhode Island State Agricultural College.

Miraculously, the public's attitudes completely supported R.I.S.A.C. In hearings, meetings, and newspapers, the idea of a 'people's college' rather than a college for the aristocracy was stressed, and became the basic source of long-standing opposition to Brown's continued use of funds from the Morrill Act. More and more, people were behind the growth of the small agricultural school, particularly the residents of South County. Finally, their stubbornness prevailed, and funds were transferred, and the name of the school was changed to the Rhode Island College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts.

The college was born. A symbolic gesture by the students, exuberant over winning the first big battle, and knowing it would be all uphill from there, marked its birth. A torchlight procession from the center of Kingston to the center of the school, the quad, was formed, and ended with speeches and bell-ringing. A flag was run up, and the occasion was saluted when the excited students shot off 25 rounds from the cannon. On the last round, however, too much gunpowder burst a huge hole in the side of it. To the relief of the nearby residents, the explosion quieted the students, and they all went home to bed.

So there stands Old Ben Butler, forgotten veteran of a prestigious battle. He doesn't go completely unnoticed, though. It is known that lovers have left notes to each other in his gaping wound. Yet the damage in its side seems like it's been there for ages, and the cannon itself seems as if it has been growing out of the ground for as long as the grass surrounding it. Nevertheless, the dignity is there, and if someone would just stop, look and appreciate it, they'd sense that feeling of history still very much alive within the stone gates of URI.

Preface

Within the leaves of this yearbook, we earnestly hope you will discover that which we have discovered accidentally ourselves while putting it together. There is an atmosphere of change between the covers; a subtle theme of diversion and variety, that has somehow been created more or less by chance. For, in the beginning, it was felt that there was no need for a theme — it seems every theme or gimmick had been touched upon previously, and there would be no need for such foolishness this year. Fortunately, we were wrong. A yearbook creates its own theme, a universal one that cannot be ignored no matter how it may be disguised in some other 'way-out' idea. That theme is change, and, to us, there could be no other.

It just makes sense that any yearbook, all yearbooks, reflect the emotions and events of passing time, and, more important, how they grow, develop, stagnate, die, or live on. That is change, and it can happen so subtly that even those who write about it and photograph it do not capture its essence at first.

Only this completed book portrays it, we believe, in its rare, untouched form. We have tried not to tamper with it or overdo it — and we hope it is less blatant than in yearbooks that have come before. But, it is there to find, to read about, to appreciate — and, we hope, to enjoy.

Registration

"Hey Pete, what's the name of that course that was your easy A?"

This is only one of the thousands of questions that emerge from the Administration's answer to the ultimate, catastrophic, traumatic experience . . . registration.

Upon entering this academic madhouse we find all types of students. Freshmen encountering their first taste of being 'screwed' by the process to battle-scarred upperclassmen who never seem to get used to the lines, lost credits, and heart failures.

Of course there are those 'chosen few' who never seem to have any trouble, but for those of us in the majority, those of us who have had both our schedules and credits eaten by that eternally hungry URI computer, we know the torment of the situation that makes even strong men cry. The Administration should consider giving credits for getting credits.

WASTED

*I'm only looking through a glass
I guess that is the word
By sitting in this class, I feel my life is made absurd.*

*So many thoughts keep running around Inside each student's head
But, acting as though their mouths are bound, they're Reacting like the dead.*

*They sit there, motionless, with eyes ahead
Staring at a face that frowns.
Neither hand is raised nor word is said
In waiting for that bell to sound.*

*With books to read and exams to take
And many a deadline to meet,
School, to me, is a monstrous farce,
But it keeps me off the street.*

*I know there are some thoughts that lurk here —
I'm ready to change — and then,
When I'm finally getting my mind to work
It's back to studies again.*

Is it true that 'the academic experience' is far behind us now? It is likely considered by many that academia is now merely a farce. Yet, on the other hand, it could be alive and well, under disguise. Is there merely 'movement' on this campus — indeed, 'movement without progress'? Or are there still intellectuals roaming about, enjoying their classes, visiting their professors, thumbing profusely through journals at the library, sacrificing their sex lives for enlightening evenings with William Faulkner and Freud?

When an obscure freshman invades this boundless, bewildering, chaotic excuse for an educational system called URI, the first doctrine he embraces is this: 'Don't jump the fences of life, find a way around them.'

And that is the way it goes for almost all four years. You learn the ropes — you play the games. You become an expert con artist, you become a walking tape-recorder, regurgitating facts that later fade into nothingness, until it is all a foggy maze of useless figures and terms, just in time for you to receive your degree — your award for learning nothing, but throwing up everything at the right time and place.

The forecast is not all clouds, however. The sun breaks through when one small fact, one good class, one worthwhile professor is recalled. For that minute glimmer of intelligence makes it seem relevant.

Let us not forget that our duty towards knowledge depends upon we, the learners, alone. The ultimate value of academics can't be measured according to the worth of professors and their classes. Students must look to no one but themselves for knowledge. So, take some advice — pick an easy course.

international house

Most people on this campus have been misled in their ideas about the International House. Contrary to popular belief, the House is not merely for foreign students. In fact, what is important is that most of us don't realize that we are all truly foreigners, whether we are American, Asian, African or European.

The I.H. of URI was established four years ago. The battle for its acquisition was carried on by a dedicated group of students who had previously been members of the All Nations Club. From what I understand, it was quite a fight with the Administration, and, at the time, students were willing to risk their very presence in the school for what they believed was right.

The purpose of the House is to provide a common meeting place for all members of the university community, along with the objectives of fostering the academic, cultural and social aspects of university life.

Presently, there are about 220 students from 54 different countries here at URI. The majority of them come from Taiwan, India, Iran, Hong-Kong and Nigeria. However, others hail from the distant shores and lands of Europe, South America, Africa and Asia. In addition, there is substantial number of foreign faculty here.

Today, the I.H. is not just a building on the corner of Alumni Ave. and Plains Road. It has become one of the most popular organizations on campus. It boasts a sizable number of Americans who have recently become members. Some of the year's projects include the International Week, orientation for new international students, dances, picnics, dinners and a week-long trip to the United Nations.

It is not merely a social club. We as members are involved in policies that will affect students in general. All activities are planned by our own board of governors, which is composed of 11 students selected by the student body in December. Any URI student, American or foreign, can run for office. This year, for the first time, an American student was elected as president of the organization.

Slowly but surely, we at International House have seen a realization on the part of the rest of the campus community that ours is a dynamic and far-from-defunct organization. Most important, before anything else, the I.H. is people — people who are willing to share unselfishly a little of themselves with others.

Howling at the moon, an instinctive canine trait, has recently, in terms of evolutionary regression, imbued itself deeply on the characters of many modern Homo Sapien. An easily observable social function of man is his natural attraction to those florid institutions of drink that have extended themselves far beyond the sanctorious limits of this academic hole. Thus, I am a gravitational being, floating in an endless orbit of alcohol, searching for the satellite that mysteriously draws me. Meet me at the celestial bar, and we'll get loaded.

The Pub, a hallowed section of atrophied campus reality. Memories of those beer sticky, beer smelly nights, crowd to crowd congruity, up against the wall identification, and the slurred beauty of mind-fogged perception. The absorption of liquor comes easily enough to the URI student as their indoctrination to the scene of drink is as academic as the academics themselves.

The phone booth jam of the fifties relinquishes its pride to the sight of one Saturday night. Within this vibrating ectoplasm lies the thoughts of the profound and the revelations of the sublime. Personalities challenge the impossible as one ponders, "is it possible to score on a Monday night?" And the intellectual barrier is confronted as we examine the water ring left by the last precious mug.

A community of drunkards, wallowing in the dregs of our own dreams. The major stronghold of the legal escape exists, and it may live forever. For the whole context can be understood within the experience itself. The Pub and the Cup Room remain an endless infinity of smoke and booze and the first frontier of campus fantasy.

Somebody apparently knew what they were doing when they built the dormitories downhill from the Union, for the wobbled walk home seems that much easier when the grade is with you.

Politics and Professionalism

They did a good job this year, it cannot be denied. Albanese walks around like he knows it; Tougas, shy and reserved, could be just another quiet, good-looking freak — one of many. They are like day and night. But together Agriculture major and Political Science major have probably been the most productive team on campus. And it shows when one reviews the year's accomplishments of the URI Student Senate.

Among those were the Mackal Forum review and the development of campus student co-ops. The Mackal Forum, "sprung on us" by the board of regents, says Tougas, awakened the senate as to where priorities of the administration should lie. Questions were raised and opposition was formed against the planned construction of a school hockey rink.

The co-ops, including Cellar Sounds, a book co-op, and photography co-op were quite successful, and stimulated the idea of alternative buying. The bookstore was losing at least some of its patrons. Also, the shuttle bus came into being, and although not a tremendous success, more plans are being made for the system for next semester.

Albanese without Tougas, and vice-versa, seems almost as hard to accept as ham without eggs. The two belong together, and together they proved their worth to the Student Senate, and the school.

Cigar

"All I know is what I read in the papers."

— Will Rogers (1879-1935)

In a grand traditional fashion of the first Puritan newsletter, the Good 5 cent Cigar has been the major source of news on the URI campus. Disposed of twice weekly, students regard our paper as little more than hardly recyclable. Wednesday and Friday are decorated with the symbolic rejection of flying in the breeze.

The answer, indeed, is 'blowin in the wind' because within mindless waste, lies the framework for the idea that the audience is primarily a mindless entity to begin with. They and the staff are never really recognized by any as the one established system that is constitutionally guaranteed Freedom.

A concerted dedicated effort produces an outlet for the balance of a campus society. The conservative, radical, or liberal are all invited to speak as loud and clearly as they may. The printed word, burned in unsuspecting effigy by the local garbageman, remains to challenge and report. Overflowing drawers of clip files, quietly record the history of the student's life at the university, remembering the things that many overlook in their haste. Discriminating and discerning the ideologies that flow incessantly from a campus community, can at the least, be a very nasty job.

But where does the appeal hide? Do we concern ourselves only with the slightly inductive nature of the classifieds, or can we truly say that URI journalism is effective. Our newspaper is not the Washington Post, or the Providence Journal, winning the Pulitzer Prize for investigative reporting, yet the essential purpose of informing the people is still there. One autonomous group, sometimes considered the newsroom 'clique,' produces a small bi-weekly paper called the Good 5-cent Cigar.

They say it's what this country really needs.

Football

In a year which produced more highlights than Rhode athletics had seen in decades, from the hiring of Jack Kraft to the Mackal Forum controversy, football in 1973 stands out as the "highlight of highlights." It was a rags to riches episode that saw the Ram gridders complete their first winning season at Kingston in 7 years with a down-to-the-wire race for the Yankee Conference title on the final day of the season.

Rhode Island, without a conference victory the previous year, came within a point of winning the title, but had to settle for second place by virtue of a 7-7 tie with Connecticut before 12,092 fans, the largest crowd ever at Meade Field.

Enough? Not quite. A week after their title game the Rams, accompanied by a party of over 300 students, alumni and faculty flew to Frankfurt, Germany, where URI beat the US Air Force All-Stars 34-6 on Thanksgiving Day becoming the first collegiate football team ever to play on European soil.

The Rams opened their 1973 season with a 3-57 trouncing of Northeastern at Boston College which was capped by a 95-yard touchdown pass play from Steve Crone to Danny Weed; a pass-run play that now stands as the longest in Rhody record books.

The following week URI met Brown at Providence, and after trailing by 12-0 for three periods, the Rams exploded for 20 points in a 9-minute span to take the lead 21-20 with less than a minute remaining. With 12 seconds left on the clock, Brown turned a daydream into a nightmare scoring on an 80-yard bomb and pushing over a two point conversion to tie the Rams 20-20.

Things continued to go sour for URI a week later as they came home to drop a 20-7 decision to Maine in a game the Rams were never really into, bringing their season mark to 1-1-1.

URI got back on the winning track the following Saturday against Vermont with a come-from-behind effort over UVM at Burlington. Rhode Island, behind 7-0 throughout the contest, put two late touchdowns and a two point conversion across the goal line and snuck away from Burlington with a 15-14 win for the Rams' first conference victory in two years and the beginning of a four game winning streak.

The Rams carried their 2-1-1 record to Amherst as decided underdogs to a strong UMass squad and what followed turned out to be one of the most exciting grid contests in New England in 1973. Tied at 14 points apiece at halftime, the Rams exploded for three TD's in the third quarter and led 34-14 midway through the period. A record seven interceptions by the Ram secondary gave the URI offense opportunities galore. UMass struck back for three straight scores of their own and took the lead back 35-34 with less than two minutes remaining. 59 seconds showed on the clock when the Rams were faced with a fourth down situation with 15 yards to go. Rhody decided to go for broke and Molly McGee bolted through a gaping hole on a delay and went 31 yards unmolested to the end zone to give Rhody a 41-35 upset before 14,500 dejected UMass fans.

Though the Rams didn't dominate in their return home a week later, they had little trouble handling Boston University in a 14-9 ho-hum affair at Meade Field for URI's third straight win, upping their season slate to 4-1-1.

In a conference survival showdown that produced even odds with the bookie before game time, URI treated a homecoming crowd of almost 10,000 to a 40-16 whumping of the Wildcats to run their winning string to four straight and a 5-1-1 season mark.

URI bit the dust the following week against a powerful Temple team (third ranked in the East) in Philadelphia as the Rams were outsize, overpowered and outscored to the tune of 43-0.

The season boiled down to one contest, a conference

SOME HIGHLIGHTS

The overall 5-2-2 record is the best since 1967 and is only the second season in the last 18 for a winning campaign.

The team is the second highest scoring eleven in Rhode Island football history (179 points).

The team played the historic Thanksgiving Day game against the Air Force in Frankfurt, Germany, winning 34-6 and becoming the first collegiate football team ever to play on European soil.

Tailback Sylvester "Molly" McGee set an all time season's mark for carries (172), breaking Pat Abbruzzi's record of 170 set in 1953.

Punter Dan Callahan set an all time season's mark for punting average (40.3) and led the Yankee Conference in that category as well.

Quarterback Steve Crone became the first sophomore in history to throw nine touchdown passes in a season.

championship tilt with UConn. The Huskies came to Kingston at 5-0 and the Rams (4-1) needed a victory to claim a share of the title. The largest crowd for any event in URI history turned out 12,000 strong to jam Meade Field on a cold November 17.

The tension lasted until the final gun which sounded with both teams deadlocked at 7-7 and URI was forced to settle for a second place finish with a 4-1-1 and 5-2-2 overall.

"As a coach, I have to be very pleased with the way the game of basketball was played over our 25 games this year. The final record of 11-14 is incidental as to how the club performed."

That's the way URI coach Jack Kraft summed up his first season at Kingston after 12 highly successful campaigns at Villanova in which 11 of his teams went to post-season tournaments.

"We did things that are absolutely necessary for a good team, making mistakes, naturally, but this comes through inexperience and perhaps a bit more talent on the part of the individual," Kraft concluded.

"But we did play some good defense which is ultra-important, and we did play as a team, practicing our fundamentals. This is no more than a coach can ask of a team in his first year at the helm."

The Rams did indeed have a "good" season when one compares it to the 1972-73 campaign when the team finished with a 7-18 record (the worst in the history of URI) and were fifth in the Yankee Conference with a 5-6 mark. This year's club had a 6-5 conference slate, good for fourth place.

as a high-scoring aggregation, averaging only 66.5 points a game, but it is the best defensive team in the past quarter century at URI. Rhode Island's 1950-51 squad, coached by Robert "Red" Haire limited its opponents to 1864 points in 28 contests, an average of 66.6 points a game. This year's edition of the Rams held its opponents to 68.1 points a game in 25 contests.

Offensively, Rhode Island was led by junior forward Randy Hughes with 333 points and a 13.3 ppg average. Hughes topped the team in rebounding with 204 for an 8.2 average. Overall, Hughes led the club in eight statistical categories, including most field goals (141), field goal percentage (49%), free throws attempted (77), and personal fouls (79).

Senior co-captain Joe Charles led the Rams in three other areas: field goals attempted (320), assists (104) and turnovers (95). Charles was second to Hughes in scoring with 298 points for an 11.9 ppg average. Junior guard Nelson Lopes of East Providence, R.I., headed the team in free throw shooting with a 79% mark.

Charles and Hughes shared the year's top individual scoring efforts of 24 points in a single game with Charles getting his against St. John's and Hughes against Murray State. Hughes also had the best individual rebounding effort against UConn when he grabbed 19.

Season highlight victories included the triple-overtime 80-70 upset of Connecticut at Kingston; the 68-66 triumph over Los Angeles State in the Oral Roberts Classic; two wins at the Providence Civic Center over Seattle (56-53) and Marshall (83-63); a 71-62 victory at Kingston over South Florida, and the season's top offensive effort, a 91-70 win over Holy Cross at Keaney Gymnasium.

Also to be pointed out were superlative efforts in losing causes against Boston College (80-85), Providence College at the Civic Center (73-76) and Temple at the Palestra (52-56).

The team lost only Charles and fellow co-captain Steve Dolecki to graduation. Four of the five starters return along with what appears to be one of the most solid groups of freshman recruits in the nation with Jack Kraft's signing of 6-4 Stanley Wright of New York City, 6-9 Victor Soares of East Providence, 6-0 Jimmy Williamson of nationally top-ranked Wilbur Cross High School in Connecticut, 6-9 Randy Wilds of Miami, Florida and 5-10 R.I. All-Stater Bill Perry of Central.

Sub-varsity coach Harvey Kohn's team finished with a 4-14 record for the season with notable victories over P.C.'s subvarsity (78-71) and Rhode Island Junior College (82-58). The Ramlets were led in scoring by 6-3 forward Donald Duarte from Johnston, R.I. The former Tolman High standout scored 212 points in 18 games for an 11.7 ppg average.

URI Wrestling

Centralization of certain sports in URI's "going bigtime" athletic program makes 'biggies' out of revenue producers such as football and basketball, but there is another group of Rams on the rise in the ascension of URI's wrestling team to the number one ranking in New England.

In a season highlighted by their first-ever first place finish in the New England championships (tying with UMass), the Ram grapplers successfully defended their Yankee Conference title and won the MIT Invitational Holiday Tournament over 29 other schools while coasting past all seven of their New England opponents and with upsets over Cleveland State and Navy posted a 10-5 record.

W. Merguerian

B. Emerson

Jim Urquart, a two-time New England and Yankee Conference champion finished his career at URI with a record of 43-4-1, the best posted by a Ram wrestler.

Scott Pucino, returns this year as a good bet to break that record.

Rhode Island will miss the services of graduating Joe Savino whose 39-6-2 record helped him to 2 Yankee Conference titles.

The Rams' young head coach Alan Nero was named New England's Coach of the Year for the second straight season.

Several crowds in excess of 1,000 at Keaney Gym suggest that wrestling isn't just an "upstart's" success and the Ram matmen appear on the verge of national prominence.

URI Baseball

In a thrilling late-season comeback, the URI baseball team won its last five league games, including two doubleheader sweeps, and captured the 1974 Yankee Conference championship. The Rams hadn't won the conference title since 1949, the first year of the league's competition.

Led by righthander Ed Zabiliski's 11-inning, 1-0 no-hitter over New Hampshire to gain a tie for the title, the Rams went on to take the nightcap of the season-ending doubleheader at Durham, 7-6 in ten innings to win the title with a 6-2 conference record. URI finished the campaign with an overall 8-9 slate, its best in four years.

Highlights of the season in addition to Zabiliski's no-hitter over New Hampshire, included his 3-0 shutout over Holy Cross and a 2-1 win over UConn, breaking a 19-game losing streak to the Huskies over the past eight years, and a twinbill sweep over UMass, the first time URI had defeated the minutemen in three seasons.

Striking Out

Lady Godiva would have turned over in her grave. No one knows why or how it came about — ladies and gentlemen flapping their finery in the fluttery breeze — it just happened. The warm weather came in April — and so did spring fever. But the fever grew to epidemic proportions, and everyone seemed to be running a high temperature. Thus, along with the summery climate, the less apprehensive slowly shed their coverings, and one by one, or two by two, exposed their hidden secrets to us all. The more timid enjoyed the show: every day more rumors were circulated of the coming night's expectations. The highlight of the short time it lasted was the night on the quad. Flocks of bare-assed young ladies and gents, in a symbolic gesture of 'freedom of body and spirit', climbed to the top of a huge dirt mound, revealing themselves for all the world to see. Maybe Charles Darwin could explain it if he were here. True — it is surely the way we were all made to be — in the buff — but, in observing some of the specimens that came out of the woodwork those few days in April at URI, one cannot help to agree that some of us should — to put it bluntly — keep our pants on.

Aesthetics

URI has its share of artists. They mingle at the Ram's Den and create within the cavernous cement walls of Fine Arts. That building holds a menagerie of the talented elite. They practice, they paint, they make music — they season an otherwise drab campus community with their varied products.

Notable efforts that seeped from the walls of the stark white building on the corner of the campus this year were the music department's piano competitions and the theater department's production of "Romeo and Juliet."

On February 27, the "Good Five Cent Cigar" called the piano competition "the greatest cultural event in years." The Rhode Island International Master Pianist Competition was held in Edwards Hall from February 20-24. Jorge Federico Osorio, 22, a native of Mexico, became first-place winner, reaping an award of $4,000. Taking second place, Leon Bates of Pennsylvania took a $2,000 prize. The event was a musical milestone for URI, and yet, unfortunately, far from enough people attended it.

For months and months, the production of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" was being planned. The enormous amount of work that went into it was evident when the play was finally born. The costumes and scenery were realistic and artistic. And, in particular, Bill Murphy as Romeo and Deborah Cafolla as Juliet represented well the talent in the URI theater department. Tickets were sold out in record time, and the demand was so great that a few additional productions were attached onto the original schedule. Each audience seemed impressed, and it was almost universally agreed upon that director Judy Swift and all her proteges did a fine job. Indeed, 1973-74 seems to have been a very successful year for almost all URI artists.

Contaminated Cloisters

We enter them early in September and leave them sometime in May. And according to the way the individual responds to this brick-wall environment, it can either be the shortest, or longest, ten months of their college career. Dormitories at URI are in themselves a contained community of students, experiencing perhaps the most valid, tangible education a University can offer, exposure to our peers.

Within any given four walls of any of the 19 residence halls on campus, students find themselves confronted with continually changing situations that reflect, for the most part, the life-styles of the college student of the Seventies. The spontaneous, self-imposed rituals of instant energy complete the scenario for those who experience the freedom of living alone for the first time in their lives. The walls vibrate with people, and like bees in the hive, they are moving and living at an ever-quickening pace. They make noise, ranging from lovers' screams, to pounding walls, to over-amplified stereos, to thumping heads on solid wood doors.

Yet it is interesting being a part of this involved microcosm called a dormitory. It is not unusual to find things pulsating one night at very high levels, and then the next morning be the only one left on the hallway. The intensity can halt and usually does, at the slightest notice.

Sometimes this whole transition can be very disturbing to the person with a more acute feeling of loneliness, but to find solitude is something rare enough to make it novel around a place like this University. A person tends to savour those moments when the hum of the electric lights is the only noticeable sounds of human development, and the undisturbed stillness spreads itself like a blanket over the campus.

"Shhhhhh..." He motioned to me with one finger on his lip to hush. We stood there, in the semi-darkness of the disheveled room and listened to the silence. Shortly after we started this game of quiet we heard a noise that pierced, ever so sharply, the peace we both knew. It was a piano, and a drunken piano player, who ushered his music through the hallways and across the streets of the deserted campus. The fog seemed to soften the harshness of it all, or that he didn't even know how to play the piano, that made him sound so bad."

After the vacations, the momentary trips into the wilderness of the 'real world,' they all return. Even the ones who vow they'll never return to that 'pit of human beings' after they've found a comfortable couch down the line, always come back. In visions of sober reflection, they'll all agree that one Friday night, a long time ago, was possibly the most revealing in their lives.

"See that window... fourth floor up... three in!" Alex eagerly said to his wife.

"Yeah..." she said, not really understanding the importance of his concentration.

"Well, hangin' out that window, about six years ago, really drunk and really sick, I saw you for the first time."

They are there, those solid structures of University housing, and, as one critic once observed, those "great, big, ugly, soulless buildings, uninspired in design, with paperthin walls, stingy little rooms, and no style at all" will, most likely, be there for a long, long time.

The greek system offers many new friends, each with his own personality. It is a once in a lifetime opportunity to meet different types of people who share a common feeling of brotherhood and sisterhood. One tends to learn more of himself as an individual as he or she is to live and interact with others. Through a sharing of responsibility, personalities, knowledge, involvement and intellect, a person participates in self-growth.

There are many happy and sad times in Greek life — but the sad times are overcome by the friendship that is felt within each person and among all. This unique friendship is what makes us one in our objectives but also separate in our life-style. And this is what Greek living is all about.

Graduation is slowly approaching and very soon all that will be left of my college days will be memories. In a few years, when I think back to these times, the memories that will probably remain foremost in my mind will be those of the fraternity.

The past three years of living in the house have gone by fast, much too fast, but they have been years filled with experiences shared with guys that I have come to consider as my brothers. We have enjoyed good times together — at socials, parties, drinking and studying together, but, most important, merely by enjoying each other's company, 'rapping' with each other. Along with the good times there have also been trying times that we have been able to cope with and overcome because we faced them together.

Fraternity is a unique experience in life. It involves the sharing of an individual's talents and personality, in short, the sharing of himself with the other people he lives with. A fraternity is not a physical structure, a house, but rather, a common spirit that unites a group of individuals. For this reason I will not be leaving behind merely memories of my college experiences, but instead, I will be taking with me friendships that have developed from those experiences, friendships that will be binding for life.

As I rush out of college, into that unknown future, watching the clock move ahead ever so rapidly toward the time of tomorrow, I am unsure of now. I pause and think about the past four years of living in my home, my sorority, where people have cared enough to accept me as I am.

I reflect upon the friendships I've made here, those all-night raids ending in the shower and wet clothes, working and living together with fifty-nine distinct individuals. I wouldn't trade this for any other life which college, or the world, has ever offered me.

I know more now than four years ago today, it has been years that have made me cope, laugh, cry, search, learn, find, live, love, and feel the sorrow of leaving behind a part of me, leaving behind something which means more to me than most realize.

As I sit in my home on one of the last nights I'll ever spend here, anxious and ready to leave, but hating to go, I realize that the true meaning of sisterhood is never fully realized until it's almost over. If living here has done anything, it has made me become something, to everyone I'm close to, and to myself.

You learn many things over intercession. You learn what it's like to have to live with your parents over an unbearable length of time, you learn that doing nothing is mental torture, you learn what it's like to eat real mashed potatoes again. All things considered, however, the most sobering thing you learn over intercession is how much you've changed; freshmen are shocked at themselves, sophomores try to ignore it, juniors gingerly face it, seniors accept it.

For instance, let's say you're like most people, and you look forward to vacation as a time for reunions with old high school buddies. So you all get together at the local bar, each eager to tell the funniest story, impatient to share reminiscences, ready to drink one another under the table. You realize how much you've changed. And yet, it seems your friends have similarly been corrupted. It seems that the two most shocking things everyone learns about their friends from high school are, naturally, the fact that practically everybody has lost his or her virginity, and, last but not least, almost everyone smokes cigarettes.

Yes, even the bespectacled, pimply ex-president of the high school coin club has a butt in his hand, billowy clouds enveloping his pointy head. It seems that almost everyone has fallen prey to those dreaded sticks, if your friends are like you, you've all realized what mental midgets you are, just by the fact that you can't quit.

Similar to members of the 'weight watchers' club, quitters are all commonly unified by one characteristic: their lack of will power. The cause of this deadly incapacity is called the nicotine fit. Contrary, to popular belief, the nicotine fit is not a myth. It is sheer, cruel reality when you sit in the midst of a smoke-filled dining hall, surrounded by people lighting up and blowing smoke rings in your face.

Only a smoker can understand the mental torture involved. There is a deep-rooted hatred for cigarettes within you, you utterly despise them, and yet, you keep giving in. And your noble, non-smoking friends start stealing your packs of butts, and you get downright hostile in defense — desperate, in fact.

Then the day comes when you rush to your desk on a second thought, mostly because the room smelled like it was burning up, just in time to find your cigarette, which had fallen out of its precarious rest on some cheap little ashtray you'd bought, burning a neat, brown-edged hole through the psychology term paper you had stayed up all night before to finish. Bummer.

Finally, you decide to be truthful with yourself. For once in your life, you're convinced that you've got to start fresh; a new beginning, so to speak, and you chuck the remainder of your cigarettes, one by one, as a noble and symbolic gesture but shaky gesture, into the nearest wastebasket.

Thus, the long, agonizing withdrawal period begins. You painfully avert your eyes every time you catch someone pulling a small, red, crush-proof box out of their pocket. You buy six packs of gum, and pop a piece in your mouth whenever and wherever you get that familiar urge. The hours, days pass, and you slowly gain your self-confidence, even if someone is smoking in the same room. Time has tested you, and you've done pretty well.

But then, just when you'd least expect it, it happens — a friend offers you one. And as you ponder, you figure that 'just one can't hurt.' And you do it. You take the damn thing and light it up. And that old, relaxed, contented feeling returns. You sit back, and enjoy. You realize how much you've missed by quitting. By God, you're in Marlboro Country again.

... AND YOU PLAY THE GAME SO WELL. . .

It seems that we fall in and out of love continually. The 'game' is an eternal one . . . you see a rather interesting, rather sexy, rather beautiful face — an incidental encounter, a furtive glance . . . reciprocated, then the first moves — delicate but daring. Isn't that almost always the way the primary scenes to romance begin? And, since most of us fall in and out of love so often, don't all the moves seem at first to fall in place, later to become rather routine — almost like learning how to play monopoly? Once you learn the rules it's a cinch.

Ah, but how sweet it is, nevertheless. Each new countenance and personality is a new beginning, a new challenge. So what if it ends sooner or later — it was worth the first few moments of innocence, anyway.

Love is a touchy subject, especially in a place where its meaning has become as transient as bobby sox. Did they have real love in the 'good old days,' or did they merely play the same games as we do now? Did the matronly virgin of the 40's save herself for the man she'd be pinned to someday, or was she really a swinger in disguise? How did the frat man of the 50's vent his anxieties? Was he a perpetually sneaky bathroom inhabitant — more so than the liberal male of the 70's, or can the men of both decades be considered equally as horny?

Maybe the obstacles that confronted the lovers of yesteryear (chaperones, restrictions, priotals) made things so much more romantic than they are today. Perhaps the harder it is to get a good lay, the more you appreciate a good lay.

Seriously, however, it is a truly precarious thing to tell someone you love them. And it's even worse if you really feel you do. And, unless this love is reciprocated, it could be hell. Your marks inevitably go down when you're in love, you can't think worth a damn, the words in your poli. sci. book turn into flowers right before your eyes, and you finally lose a night of sleep over something other than a final exam. Is it worth all the hassle, you ask yourself. Maybe not, but it sure is amusing, if not meaningful. But no matter whether it is a neat and swift one-night stand, or a heavy three-month fiasco, there is something valuable in the eternal exchange of feeling; the immortal 'meeting of minds and bodies,' the primary mental encounter and the inevitable physical encounter.

Indeed, this eternal exchange and encounter called love is a glorious, fantastic, enlightening experience, be your lover a stranger or a long-loved one. Be it five minutes or fifty years. It's worth it. Chalk it up, my love.

Red and yellow box

with pictures of baboon, tiger, lion — and your friends inside.

At night you leave your wax paper bag and roam across the thick crumbled jungle, playing among the flowers.

*At sunrise you retreat back to your box —
I come along and diminish your pack by eating a few,
and if in a good mood,
a feast.*

— Alex Caserta

When I was One-and-Twenty

*When I was one-and-twenty
I heard a wise man say,
'Give crowns and pounds and guineas
But not your heart away;
Give pearls away and rubies
But keep your fancy free.'
But I was one-and-twenty,
No use to talk to me.*

*When I was one-and-twenty
I heard him say again,
'The heart out of the bosom
Was never given in vain;
'Tis paid with sighs a plenty
And sold for endless rue.'
And I am two-and-twenty,
And oh, 'tis true, 'tis true.*

— A. E. Housman

*It was there,
When I was in the rain
I came to know
Where the delicate Balance hid.
Me, myself and the rain
Found it possible
To touch the soul.*

*Touching the wetness with Probing fingertips,
Water was pressed gently 'tween us . . .
In tune with the inside,
Inside.*

— Stephen Andrade

The last days of the year, much like the pre-dawn of early day, in Kingston is quiet, reflective and as usual a congenial moment of love between friends. The love flows as easily and smoothly as the waterfall that would carry us to sleep every peaceful night spent in that company. We are tightly knitted, and like the grains of a weather beaten barnboard, run our paths accordingly and respectively over the bumps and knots of our existence. So diversified, so individual, yet so evenly paralleled and complementary. We find it natural to touch and explore the bodies and minds of those whom we've known always as placid folks. Hardly, could one find a more beautiful thing to wish for in a lifetime. It is this beauty, somehow intrinsic, which governs the continuance of our associations. The winters have come and gone in their usual relentless fashion, but appreciatively, the friends have remained and withstood whatever difference may have fallen between them. I feel that solid bond and know that, somehow, it could not be any other way. And so you are, my friends, a beautiful clan, a part of me as much as I am a part of you.

— Stephen Andrade

*The question came slightly why you couldn't see
But the magic of sight, I was told
Is not to look
Yet, behold the image
And the trick of mastering your fate is to capture your magic and spread its blanket over your eyes till you can no longer see Then use that strength to feel that magic light and stretch your heart to hold your magic sight.*

Only then, can you really see.

— Stephen Andrade

HELLO

*As I stand here for awhile,
Hoping by chance you catch my smile,
I look, I listen, I think . . . I know,
Yet I wait just a bit,
To go on with the show.*

*In such a short time,
So many faces I've seen,
Should you be any different,
From the ones inbetween.*

*Sometime, someplace, somewhere, . . . someone,
Laws of average,
There must be one.
Patience is the motto,
Only few do follow,
Talk to me . . . I am alone.*

*I ask you your name,
And hope that you smile,
You know it feels good,
To have a friend for awhile.*

*Morning has come,
Our separate lives to we go.
Always is there a reason,
For a one-night show.*

*To ask, to question, to wonder . . . To believe
All of my ideas,
Seem so hard to conceive.
I hope for the day,
When my dreams come true,
If you keep smiling,
It should even be you.*

— Andy Ellison

*the dormitory was empty
the long weekend had come;
the campus sat in silence for the residents had all gone*

*you wandered down a corridor looking for a chance, you came upon my open door —
in my nightgown — would you like to dance?*

*we began slowly,
but as the music started to rise,
we danced into a frenzy —
you came — I opened my eyes.*

we rested against the cinder blocks and then, I saw you smile, evening closed in around us as we danced again for a while *something happened to the music

I couldn't recognize that tune you pulled my nightgown down again:
"do you have to leave so soon?"*

*the dormitory is blasting the people are back at last.
"the trouble," they say, "with this campus is that everything happens too fast."*

— ems

*"Could it be that it was all so simple then,
Or has time rewritten every line?
If we had the chance to do it all again,
Tell me, would we, could we?"*

— Marvin Hamlisch

"The only limit to our realization of tomorrow will be our doubts of today. Let us move forward with strong and active faith."

— F.D.R.

Them

*I see them,
The quiet ones who are my friends
Yesterday.
They look at me, pitying me, envying me.
They think my life is gay, frivolous, good times, no cares,
What do they know.
A different girl each week, laughter, color.
They who would have never known my world
Watch me, learn from me.
I speak to them happily trying to hide what I really feel,
Disgust, Regret,
For living in their world.*

— Barry Levin

Peach with Fuzz

During youthful awakening consciousness of visibility
 I would take foot pace and observe the hands
 as they created
 I saw the face and eyes
 as they searched
 I would sit, listen and look at the figure playing folk guitar
 There was royal blue vibrational strength from the strings and loud shrilling voice.
 Other times I would stay home and listen to (pastel red, orange and blue sounds of Dylan).
 I felt this great inquiry inside.

During my exploration
 I drifted upon white grains melting into blue velvet waters.
 The sea roars — (silver salted glitter expands from spray of water).
 The well preserved knowledge (retained for centuries) is pronounced in range from utterance to fury, about lies what is true and real.
 In every shell and grain of sand in every cry of bird, the secret replenishes with gratification, in wonder for — (colonists of brine, pampas, troposphere).

To gather diverged branches.
 To inspire new experience.
 To pause and collect one's colorful thoughts — (to assemble new pieces).

Feeling of hurt in thick heavy dark violet velvet drips.
 something lost or put aside (until time is right) profound feelings of one's life which have been subdued or mellowed.
 to challenge age and time with impulse of neon energy.

Once again, recollect — trickle by trickle,
 secured through merit, made functional.
 patience of pastel orange, fragment by fragment.

construction of meaningful answer to be completed when proper, until then, confrontation with conditions and involvement which fit at times,

or bring confusion.
 Only to obtain and utilize this wisdom,

would be a reality.

Blindness at the beginning, then vibrations must be felt, music will be heard and the light seen
 the nectar is tasted and savored.

Full knowledge will never be received but enough can be gathered to treasure happiness, fulfillment and bliss.

Rainbow filtered cavity in sky open wide.
 Blanket of brown yellow kelp, fringed on edge (feathered upon grains of sand).

as a child I made castles of sand
 as a man I am building my castle.
 Walking softly upon grains in white suit

eating a peach

with fuzz.

A. Caserta

Grey scented traditional day swaggering up cobble stone street, up

up ascending through narrow mildewed scented space — charcoal cobweb.

footsteps scatter through fragile fog (busy textured patterns of cement and stone constructing the way)

scent of dampness abound — cool blue pastel sensation.

Through dimensions

brown observing pupils scan forth.

(silhouette of man propped against sand).

gradual gust of warm atmosphere infiltrates, without warning

greys turn to pastels.

“Good morning! Good morning!”

an orange voice rings out, a strength so saturated with freshness and beauty that its bulk of power could be peeled off in slices.

only feet away

rest a large yellow-brown cart made of wood, balanced by large spoked wheels — on top, a different world — at first glance

a kaleidoscope environment

but in reality —

a collection of (sizes, shapes and brilliant colors).
once again — a level higher canopy of bright red and yellow appears as a circus tent.

in background

sounds of accordion music

voices of people ring out many dimensions become one.

Vibrations of heritage passed on through generations —

to be continued?

so simple

(reflections of an old man's face) worn by age, yet bears a smile and laughter of a child

“Good morning! Good morning!”

to live and take part of the simple things.

Graduation: The Administration Strikes Again

Once upon a time, on a cloudy June day our class of 1974 encountered our last administrative chaotic mess. In the beginning, as wild-eyed freshmen, we viewed our precious alma mater from ends of long lines which led to our schedules, our books, and our 'meals.' It seems odd that on the one day that we became a name instead of a number, the administration miraculously found a way to return us again to the end of that proverbial line, where our sole reward was an empty book. However, one cannot help feeling some sadness at leaving a place to which you have dedicated four years of whatever it is we do here. To the class of 1974, we wish you luck, health, peace, and a lifetime of short lines.
